Chapter 385: The Nature of the Celestial Armies and Dragon Armies

---

The Forces of the Divine Realms

To uphold the sovereignty of their realms and enforce their will, Ashborn, the True Celestial Being, and Sung Su-Ho, the True Dragon God, created vast armies of unparalleled power. These centillions of celestial and dragon soldiers served as their hands, extending their influence across the multiverse.

The Celestial Armies of Ashborn

Creation and Nature

The celestial armies were born from the pure light essence of Ashborn, imbued with his divine will.

Each soldier was a radiant being, glowing with the power of stars, embodying purity, law, and judgment.

Characteristics

1. Appearance:

Celestial soldiers had humanoid forms made of shimmering light. Their features were undefined yet majestic, exuding divine authority.

Each possessed two to six luminous wings, with higher-ranking soldiers having more.

2. Weapons and Tools:

They wielded divine weapons such as spears, swords, and shields made of condensed light, capable of disintegrating darkness and chaos.

Their tools were extensions of their essence, unbreakable and radiant.

3. Abilities:

Light Manipulation: They could shape light into shields, prisons, or destructive beams.

Healing and Restoration: Their touch could heal wounds and purify corruption.

Swiftness: Their speed was unmatched, allowing them to traverse entire galaxies in seconds.

4. Hierarchy:

Each army was divided into legions, led by Arch-Celestials or high-ranking celestial generals.

The most powerful soldiers were only second to the Arch-Celestials.

Purpose

The celestial armies maintained order, spreading Ashborn's light and enforcing justice in realms under his dominion.

They were guardians of creation and balance, ensuring the multiverse adhered to Ashborn's laws.

The Dragon Armies of Sung Su-Ho

Creation and Nature

The dragon armies were forged from black flames, born from Sung Su-Ho's boundless power.

Each soldier embodied ferocity, strength, and destruction, reflecting the primal power of the True Dragon God.

Characteristics

1. Appearance:

Dragon soldiers had draconic forms, varying from towering humanoid dragons to massive beasts with shimmering black scales.

Their eyes burned like molten lava, and their wings were cloaked in black flames.

2. Weapons and Tools:

Unlike the celestial armies, dragon soldiers relied on their natural weapons: claws, fangs, tails, and fiery breath.

They could summon weapons from the flames, such as infernal axes or molten swords, to amplify their destructive potential.

3. Abilities:

Fire Manipulation: They could generate and control black flames capable of consuming entire stars.

Raw Power: Their physical strength was unparalleled, capable of shattering planets with a single strike.

Flight and Agility: Their wings allowed them to maneuver effortlessly in battle, dominating both air and ground.

4. Hierarchy:

Like the celestial armies, dragon soldiers were organized into legions, led by Arch-Dragons or dragon generals.

The strongest among them were colossal dragons, second only to the Arch-Dragons.

Purpose

The dragon armies served as enforcers of Sung Su-Ho's will, maintaining his dominion through strength and fear.

They were defenders of territory and sovereignty, ensuring no force could threaten the True Dragon God Realm.

Unity and Purpose

Although the celestial and dragon armies differed in nature and purpose, they shared a common loyalty to their creators and an unyielding devotion to the Divine Triad.

Joint Operations:

In times of great threat, the celestial and dragon armies worked in unison, combining light and flame to annihilate enemies.

Their combined power was a force of unparalleled might, capable of wiping out entire dimensions.

Invisibility and Invincibility

1. Invisibility:

Both armies could remain unseen to all beings except their creators unless they chose to reveal themselves.

2. Invincibility:

Their essence was directly linked to Ashborn and Sung Su-Ho, rendering them indestructible unless willed otherwise.

The Eternal Guardians

The centillions of celestial and dragon soldiers were not merely tools of war; they were the eternal guardians of their creators' realms.

They patrolled the borders of their realms, ensuring no force dared to intrude.

They maintained balance within their realms, keeping chaos and corruption at bay.

Both armies were the ultimate testament to the power and creativity of Ashborn and Sung Su-Ho, standing as eternal symbols of their might and dominion.

Continued...